AN OMNIVOROUS COLONEL.

muled Snakes, Pupples, Horse

A man who professes to have eater more different kinds of foods in more different climes than any other man living today or than any other man that ever lived in any other time is Colonel Newnham Davis of London. "I was dining once with a Japanese family in Tokyo," says the colonel,

"when a queer covered dish was brought to the table. The servant removed the cover, disclosing a live fish wriggling and flopping inside the dish. "They then proceeded to kill it before my eyes and offered me a portion to eat. I ate it too. It was of a pecullar taste, but not unpleasant.

"Next to Japan, China offers the greatest array of marvelous dishes. 1 have eaten many disagreeable things in China-merely for the experience, of course. Among these were sea slugs, a sort of oyster, and fattened puppy. The most disagreeable, however, was a bit of cold pig's liver wrapped around a prune. There was no escape for me from eating this, though I tried to avoid it. My neighbor at the table picked up the liver and the prune with his chopsticks and held them before my lips. I could do nothing but open my mouth and allow the combination to be inserted, because it is considered a signal honor in the Celestial Kingdom to have a fellow guest offer you a dainty morsel in the aforesaid manner.

"The fattened puppy tasted some thing like a baked suckling pig. The puppy is fed on rice and milk for several months before it is killed to be eaten, and the flesh is tender and quite

I entry into France, it would seem have never heard of this being eaten, but I should imagine from the nature times the smock was now and then of the beast the flesh would be dry and stringy, coupled with a rank taste. The lion is lacking in fat. I shot several in India, but their bodies were nothing but hard muscle. It is the same with the buck you kill in India and Africa. The animals are destitute tried. The day after the disastrous treaty of Frankfort was signed France set about arming the nation. She took as a model the army of her conqueror. Thousands of millions she dispensed to create an army on Prussian lines. Quite as much she has spent in later years in changes and modifications which have tended to eliminate all that is Prussian. The French army today is an unknown quantity. The one thing known definitely is that the French are about the best material in Europe out of which to forge a fighting machine, and if the army goes not to Austerlitz, but to Sedan, the fault will lie not with the men of the sword, but with the general staff and

Spiders and Music.

It has often been said that spiders are fond of music, but a French investigator, M. Lecaillou, now asserts that this is not true. He says that their musical sense must be attributed merely to greed or to hunger. When a fly is Buy your Monuments, Tombs caught in a spider's web, it buzzes and the spider immediately makes for the place from which the buzzing comes. M. Lecaillou, by experimenting with a violin, some files, a piano a violoncello and a cornet, found that only those musical sounds which resembled the buzzing of the flies attracted the spiders. The cornet, for instance, invariably frightened them, and

> An Old Church Bell. St. Stephen's Episcopal church, East Haddan, Conn., has the oldest bell in the state. It was cast A. D. 815. It was in a church in Spain at the time of Napoleon's wars, and when the church was destroyed a thrifty Yankee tradesman bought the bell and took it over to this country. The inscription on it is in Spanish, which translated reads: "The Prior Being the Most Rev. Father Miguel Villa Murva. The Procurator, the Most Rev. Father Josef E'Stivan. Corrales Made Me. Made in Year A. D. 815."

The History of Tacitus. The entire history of Tacitus, as we have the work, was regained from a single copy found in the fifteenth century in a monastery of Westphalia. That we should owe the works of this author to one copy is a remarkable circumstance, for the Emperor Tacitus, who claimed to be a descendant of the historian, had copies of the history placed in every library of the emptr and each year had ten copies transcribed for presentation to scholars. All, it seems, perished, save the Westphalian

GIANT MAGNETS.

The Operation of Lifting Monster Loads With Them The peculiar properties of an electric current often lead one to fancy that it may perchance be endowed with the spirit of intelligence, so mysterious are its inner workings. A most curious use of electricity is the adoption of lifting magnets in machine shop and mill practice. An elec-tro magnet in its simplest form consists of a piece of soft iron wound with a large number of turns of insulated copper wire. When an electric current passes through the windings of wire the electric forces are converted into magnetic forces and the coll of wire and core of soft iron assume all the characteristics of a common steel mag-

The operation of lifting magnets is quite simple. The magnet is attached to the crane hook, and the ends of the wire forming the coll are connected directly with the dynamo. The crane is then swung so that the magnet is suspended directly over the metal to be removed. The magnet is then lowered until it comes in contact with the object, the current is turned on, the hoist is raised and the mass of metal to be moved clings to the magnet.

When the load reaches the desired point it may be dropped without first lowering the magnet or it may be lowered, the current shut off and the material deposited gently. The crane operator needs no help to load or unload, and the work can be done in half the time with a saving of from three to four men.-New York Herald.

THE BLOUSE.

Its Name Came Originally From Pelusium, In Egypt.

The environs of Pelusium, in lower Egypt, in ages past stood foremost among sunny lands where the culture of indigo and the manufacture of fabrics died with it were the principal industries. A Judgment Upon the Town. An elderly man in Shrewsbury, England, was showing a couple of friends about the town. They tarried before the place where the statue of Shrews bury's great son, Darwin, sits and "That," said the Shrewsbury man, pointing with a bulging umbrel la, "Is Darwin." "Yes," answered one of the visitors after a rather unfriend ly scrutiny, "that was him as said w all come from monkeys." "He did," went on the Shrewsbury man, "and I'll tell you another thing. Not long ago the steeple of one of our churches fell down. There are many as says it is a judgment upon the town for out-ting up a statue to 'im."
